NO WILD WEST TOWN

Big Daily Quotes C. of C. Director in Complaint Over Unfavorable Report

Tulsa's position as a western city which was put in an unfavorable light by an interview given to the New York Times by Antonio Scotti, the grand opera singer, following his tour of the country, was set right in an article which appeared in the New York Times on Sunday, July 18

Tulsa citizens, who were greatly indignant at the statements said to have been made by Mr. Scotti, will be somewhat appeared by the article. which was as follows:

Antonio Scotti, a distinguished recipient of as distinguished hospitality in all cities on his tour, was not the man quoted in the interview, nor was he aware of the Tulsa incident, or of others told in pure fun by younger members of his trope. It is fair to these, however, to say that their experience of travel was not unique, nor their expression ungallantly intended.

Fritz Kreisier, the violinist, as famous and extensive a tourist as any globetrotting opera star, lately said in print that he "had visited most of the world's cities of over 100,000 inhabitants, that in each he knew only the railroad station, the hotel and concert hall, and that they were all alike."

The average man's chause "for to admire and for to see." as Kipiling has it, "for to be old this world so wide." was denied to hand-working musicians, said Kreisler, and it seemed to him that this was a serious handicap on the musical life and profession.

"Antonio Scotti has stirred up a hornett's nest. According to the Tulsa papers the famous Scarpia and opera impresario told a New York newspaper that Tulsa was a wild west city four blocks long, where all men tote guns and taxicab drivers charge $55 for a four-block trip.

"Tulsa is too sensitive and self-conscious. All of us know that the Oklahoma metropolis is a thriving city populated by oil stock promoters. Instead of six-shooters the inhabitants carry beautifulis engraved and nicely scented stock certificates.

One of the indignant Oklahomans (and he happens to be a minister) declares in his outburst that Tulsa is the most eastern city in the west. "Tudging from the taxi tariff mentioned by Mr. Scotti, Tulsa is pathetically like New York.

Police Recover Liquor When They Raid House in Search of Burglars One bad flop deserves another. Whether it deserves it or not, that's what happened. The owner of a residence on South Chevenne is spending his vacation in Rye, Colorado, according to information given by the negro servant and his wife at the house, the chief figures in this trick of fate. The house next door was also vacant, so the servant couple hved there and watched the two houses, they said. About midnight last night the negro called up the police station and in tones that sounded as if he was scared white, said that a crowd of burgiars were going through the other house. Patrolman C. L. Sanders, motorman Charies Foley, and plainsclothesman D. B. Mondier answeled the call but found no one there when they arrived. The negro informed them that he had seen two menrunning away, but didn't know whether they had anything. In order to find if anything was missing the police went through the house and just as they were in Search of Burglars missing the police went through the house and just as they were finishing the search they found-one quart of imported Spanish sherry, and five quarts of other liquor, no burgiars were found.
